

I understand that XM Satellite Radio is under attack by members of the NAB. I invested in satellite radio because I do a lot of road travel and wanted to be able to listen to unadulterated (i.e., without commercials and the like) music, news, weather and traffic. I find their service to be first rate, and worth every penny I pay as a subscriber. And the fact the I pay for this service is what makes an attack on XM so offensive. How dare the members of the NAB dictate what I may subscribe to, listen to or otherwise partake of as a consumer. Please keep XM Radio what it is -- fresh, original and allowed to deliver its services without interference from a competing medium. Carole M. Ekker
